

BOVBERY CROWN
SEES MORGAN.

Varied Comment When the Financier's Cab Is Held Up by a Jam at Canal Street.

"TOM" RONAN ORATES.

Likewise Bill Collins, Who Remarks that It Wouldn't Do the Magnate Any Harm to Hand Out Some Change.

Incidents which are more trifles elsewhere assume a meaning of their own on the Bowery. To see J. Pierpont Morgan in the Waldorf-Astoria or on Fifth avenue would hardly awaken any comment, but to meet or see him unexpectedly on the Bowery is an occurrence which cannot be passed over lightly by the witnesses.

Yesterday afternoon, at the corner of the Bowery and Canal street, where the long string of trucks and vehicles going and coming from the ferries makes traffic a difficult maneuver at times, a hansom found itself wedged in between the curb and the chain of waiting draught horses and their persuasive drivers.

It was Morgan. Naturally the little bunch, which has its rendezvous at the corner of Canal street, is not personally acquainted with the mighty financier, and a case of mistaken identity might have been possible, but the tip came from an official source. Policeman Louis Beyer had just remonstrated with one of the more strenuous drivers for using language which was very much in discord with the ethics of the Bowery, and was climbing to the sidewalk in front of the hansom, when his eye fell on the occupant.

"Gee!" said the Policeman. "Gee! Know who that is?" He asked the question, knowing that not one of the crowd could or cared to answer it. What did they care; and would it be fitting to Bowery cavaliers to show astonishment at some "old guy" being in a hansom on the Bowery? But Louis Beyer furnished the shock in the very next minute: "It's Morgan!"

Now came the most striking evidence of the name's potency. Were one to mention W. D. Howells or Hamlin Garland to a Bowery habitué the first question would naturally be: "Who he ever fight?" But the mere mentioning of "Morgan" worked its own little magic, and the "bunch," that had been in the presence of Prince Henry, La Hung Chang and even Hail Caine without having a single opinion, all at once taken out of its latitude and began to meander in the strange region of finance.

"I wonder what he after now?" asked Bill Collins, thereby voicing a general sentiment. "J. Pierpont is always 'after something'." "Well, I'm glad in a way he is down here because," said another, "he ought to prove from the stump on next election that even the virgin soil of the beloved Bowery cannot be free from the rapacious invasion of that hideous monster, the trust," said Tom Ronan, the Bowery Democrat. "Oh, cheese it, Tom," remonstrated John Young. "There's nothing on the Bowery for him to put into a trust."

"Tom" Ronan Talks.

"There ain't" quipped Ronan. "That's how much you know about it. What's the matter with putting all the bean-eries and all the lodging-houses and all the tub-houses into one gigantic trust? Where would you be then? And wouldn't it be just in line with their nefarious practice of invading our most sacred privileges? How would you like to sit down to your corned beef and cabbage and know every time that each mouthful was going to help this blood here?" Ronan's finger, deliberately pointed at the hansom, the same little Pat Sheedy who? Would you like it? Of course not, but here, I say we must fight for our rights." "That may all be," interposed Officer Beyer, promptly, "but I don't see no reason, but this ain't the time to begin that kind of a scrap. You better wait till my side police comes and drive, and even by the horse. The Jehu, sitting like a statue, was just a trifle less leal in disguise, his tongue and his evil intent at being compelled to expose himself to the stare of the common herd of vulgar, vulgar, vulgar, even snuffed at the sugar held out by one more daring than the rest.

Bill Collins's View. "Or bet," commented Bill Collins, "all the best in front of him is dollar signs." "Ah, then rich guys make me tired," remarked Larry Dooley in an off-hand sort of way. "What's the use o' having all that dough if you don't know how to use it? If I was the fellow that pulled out a handful of chicken feed any way and ask us to join him in a little something, and that would make us a little less sore on them trusts and things. But we don't know how to use it, and then they kick because we don't like them any too well."

The blockade had been cleared, the hansom set itself in motion just as the last remark of Larry Dooley was made. That it was heard by Pierpont Morgan is very likely, but what caused the faint resemblance of a smile to appear on his stern features as the hansom turned the corner is a matter of conjecture. At any rate, if heard, it was not appreciated for the virgin soil of the Bowery is still guileless of the expected shower of chicken feed. OWEN KILDARE.

ALAS, POOR GEORGIA CAYVAN, BLIND,
SHE IS ALSO A HELPLESS MANIAC.

The Once Popular Actress Has Been Placed Under More Rigorous Restraint in a Long Island Sanitarium—She Is Violent.

It is reported that Georgia Cayvan, the actress, blind and a helpless maniac, has been transferred from Sanford Hall, Flushing, the private sanitarium in which she has been confined, to another Long Island retreat, where there is better opportunity to watch her. The report continues that she has become dangerous and fought vigorously with the attendants who carried her from the sanitarium to a carriage in waiting.

Fragmentary reports of Miss Cayvan's condition have been heard from time to time. She has been reported dead several times. When called upon to deny these reports the managers of Sanford Hall refused to say more than that Miss Cayvan was no worse. Now it appears that her mania has reached a stage that makes it impossible to keep her even in the mysterious recesses of the grim old building on the outskirts of Flushing.

It is said that she demolished all the furniture she could get her hands on, and that although she is blind she finds her way about with remarkable facility if left unrestrained.

Only a few years ago Miss Cayvan was a favorite actress in the Lyceum company, with a large circle of friends. She was named as co-respondent in the suit of Mrs. Oliver Sumner Toal against her husband, a most unjust accusation. She was shown sympathy and support such as few women have been shown, but the shock unbalanced her mind. Physical illness combined to make her condition more unfortunate, until finally it became necessary to place her in the sanitarium at Flushing from which she has just been removed. Probably nothing further will be heard of Georgia Cayvan until she dies.

JEROME WILL NOT STOP DONOVAN.

District-Attorney's Messenger Can Open Raines Law Hotel, as Health Board Sees No Objection.

District-Attorney Jerome received a communication today from President Theodore of the Board of Health, to the effect that William Donovan, a messenger in the District-Attorney's office, was engaged in a perfectly legitimate enterprise in opening for his son a Raines law hotel on West Twenty-seventh street, near Eleventh avenue.

It was intimated by Donovan's political enemies that a few days ago, when he was starting a lodging-house in the interests of the Sheehan Democracy, to whom he owes his appointment to office, Ex-Chief Devery was said to have been behind the complaint.

District-Attorney Jerome, when the matter was brought to his attention, requested President Devery to have an investigation made as to the real nature of the place Donovan was going to open. The Health Board Inspector, who was assigned to investigate, reported that Donovan was opening a Raines law hotel and not a lodging-house, as all the rooms in the house had been engaged for more than a week.

District-Attorney Jerome said there was no occasion for him to take any action as Donovan had violated no law.

WOMAN BEHEADED
BY FREIGHT TRAIN.

Crept Under Car and Was Caught by Wheels—Rival Undertakers Fought for Body and Police Called.

(Special to The Evening World.) PASSAIC, N. J., Aug. 25.—Mrs. Agnes Litchberger, forty-five, attempted to crawl under a long line of freight cars on the Dundee Branch of the Erie road, she was not aware that an engine was attached to the cars. Just as she got under a car the train backed up.

She was knocked down, her head falling across one of the rails. She screamed and tried to get out of harm's way, but the wheels caught and decapitated her. The accident was witnessed by several persons who ran to the scene and notified the brakemen. The woman's four children, ranging in years from five to twelve, were awaiting her return at their home in Second street.

While the morgue-keeper was attempting to remove the body, rival undertakers fought with him for its possession and the police were called to quell the disturbance.

POLICE CALLED TO MESSENGER STRIKE

Boys of the Despatch and Delivery Company Make Disturbance When They Quit Work.

The boys employed by the New York Despatch and Delivery Company, with headquarters at Mulberry and Bleecker streets, went on strike today, demanding increased wages. In establishing pickets and being urged on by the mother of one of the boys, they became so actively aggressive that the company called upon the police for protection, and four big policemen were sent around.

The leaders of the boys, "Jimmy" Phillips and Tony Sullivan, say that they have been working a week for going to work at 8 o'clock in the morning and often continuing in service until 1 and 2 o'clock the next morning. They demand $1.50 for the wagon boys and $1 a week for the delivery boys.

When they went to the place this morning they filled their pockets with rocks from the subway excavations and lined up opposite the offices of the company. Five boys refused to quit and these were taunted and jeered by the little strikers, none of whom is more than fifteen years old.

The mother of one of the strikers appeared while they were opposite the office and addressed them in Italian, most of the boys being of that nationality. She urged them to continue the strike until their demands were granted. They cheered her and then the police scattered the crowd.

J. Cameron, Superintendent of the company, refused to discuss the matter, but the foreman, known as "Boggs," said that the boys were not striking for more pay, but because two of their companions had been discharged yesterday. He said that these boys had been discharged for stealing, that one had confessed and had been arrested, and that the other would be arrested this afternoon.

Alphonso Sileo, sixteen years old, of No. 31 Thompson street, a leader among the boys, was arrested during a demonstration by the young strikers. The boys were carrying up and down in front of the company's offices carrying barrel staves and shouting, when the police stopped them. Sileo was charged with intimidation.

It was Sileo's mother who earlier in the day mingled with the boys, urging them on.

CATARRH OF THE BOWELS
Often Causes Hemorrhage of the Bowels.

(An Interesting Letter from Mrs. Tinker, of Georgia, Concerning Her Grandson.)

MRS. S. L. TINKER, 410 Second St., Macon, Ga., writes: "Two years ago my grandson suffered with hemorrhages of the bowels and he was treated by different doctors but without cure. We quit all other treatment and began to use Peruna, and after the use of three bottles he seemed to be quite well. He is able now to walk six miles to school every day. Peruna has certainly worked wonders for him and I shall not hesitate to recommend it."

Mrs. S. L. Tinker. Hemorrhage of the bowels is frequently the result of catarrh of the bowels. The blood vessels are so much cut off that the hemorrhage becomes permanent. Peruna cures the catarrh and thus removes the cause. The blood vessels are again opened, the hemorrhage discontinues. This is a much safer, better and more lasting way to cure hemorrhage of the bowels than to use some simple attempt to dry up the blood.

If you do not receive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis. Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

SCROFULA

I bequeath to my children Scrofula with all its attendant horrors, humiliation and suffering. This is a strange legacy to leave to posterity; a heavy burden to place upon the shoulders of the young.

This treacherous disease dwells in the body and hinders the growth and development of the faculties, and the child born of blood poison, or scrofula-tainted parentage, is poorly equipped for life's duties.

Scrofula is a disease with numerous and varied symptoms: enlarged glands or tumors about the neck and armpits, catarrh of the head, weak eyes and dreadful skin eruptions upon different parts of the body show the presence of tubercular or scrofulous matter in the blood. This dangerous and stealthy disease trenches itself securely in the system and attacks the bones and tissues, destroys the red corpuscles of the blood, resulting in white swelling, a pallid, waxy appearance of the skin, loss of strength and a gradual wasting away of the body.
